Category:Video game mods Category:Windows games Category:Windows-only games it could make a user less afraid of using its services because companies just use it to get what they want from user's data without having to comply with user's right to privacy and confidentiality. That does not mean Facebook has no limits on how the user's data is used. They have and they have no right to change that in any case because a company is not entitled to assume anything the user has said and the like has no legal protection and once the user starts providing that they might get used or even abused by the company. So in case the user provides data such as name, phone number, email address etc the company cannot just use it as they please but they can at most use it for the intended purpose that the user has provided them. That is how user's data is and there is no way a company can change that rule just because they want to. Facebook knows that a lot of people are from very protected countries or lived in their home country before they were forced to flee their home. So they also are more sensitive about their privacy and don't like to give away their data to random companies. So that's why they have a wide array of restrictions and reasons for preventing their user's data to be used. They don't want random people to access their data just because they have it. So Facebook, Google or whoever else knows that and because of that you have no other choice but to use those companies. So no matter how much the user would want to use other companies their data is not as easily and freely available like it is in Facebook. And of course if you chose to use their services, they do have the right to offer you their services. Also if you choose not to use their services they cannot prevent you from doing so either. That is as long as the user doesn't do something that is considered illegal or that damages the user or third party. At the end of the day, companies are not entitled to assume or control your data and if your data is going to be used for any purpose, the user has to be aware of that and have control over it, in one way or the other. So that's how privacy and data are. Did You Know Privacy is the main concern of most people nowadays. Most people know that their private information is being collected and that is why majority of people do not want to share it with the others. Most of them
