As the suspected shooter in last week's deadly ambush in Dallas took aim again and again at police and Dallas law enforcement officers, Clinton urged Americans to recognize the "hard truth" that officers who are "the very best of us could be killed, shot, in cold blood, killed by a couple of gunmen who want to intimidate us." Clinton's call came in the hours after she spoke at the Democratic National Convention where she will formally accept the party's nomination for president later this month against Republican Donald Trump. The bloodshed brought Clinton's voice to a national stage, where she sought to channel the anger of many Americans over police killings of African-Americans and others over the last few months. Clinton said the killings are "a sign of a deep crisis in our country 648931e174
